BOYS (AS) RESPONSIBLE ALLIES AGAINST VIOLENCE ONLINE (BRAVO)

What does being a good digital ally look like?

Treating others with respect & kindness

We all help shape the online spaces we share. This involves listening, be curious about different perspectives, and treating others with the same respect we would like for ourselves. Positive online spaces need different voices.

Thinking before sharing

We should always ask before sharing someone's photo, message, or story, and think carefully about what personal information we share with others.

Digital Allyship checklist

- THINK - Is it true?
- CARE - How might someone feel?
- CHECK - Where did this come from?
- CHOOSE - Is sharing helpful?
- SPEAK UP - How can we make things better?

Be curious. Be kind. Be critical.

Questioning the 'shoulds'

We can question messages about how girls and boys 'should' look, act or behave. Online trends can make 'stereotypes' feel normal. We think critically and challenge ideas we don't agree with.

Looking out for each other

We don't have to stand by when someone is being targeted. We can support friends, block or report problematic behaviour, and talk to someone we trust. Just because something is called a 'joke' doesn't mean it's harmless.

BRAVO is funded by RISE (ESRC grant reference UKRI4192)

Sprite+ Security, Privacy, Identity, Trust, Engagement, NetworkPlus

Centre for Protecting Women Online

The Open University